ENGINEERING AND ENVIRONMENTAL CONSULTANTS

COBA Group

COBA is a multinational and multidisciplinary group of Engineering and Environmental Consultants, founded in 1962.

The Group provides engineering consulting services ranging from basic and planning studies, technical, environmental and economic feasibility studies, design and construction design, as well as project management and works supervision, to operation follow-up and behaviour monitoring.

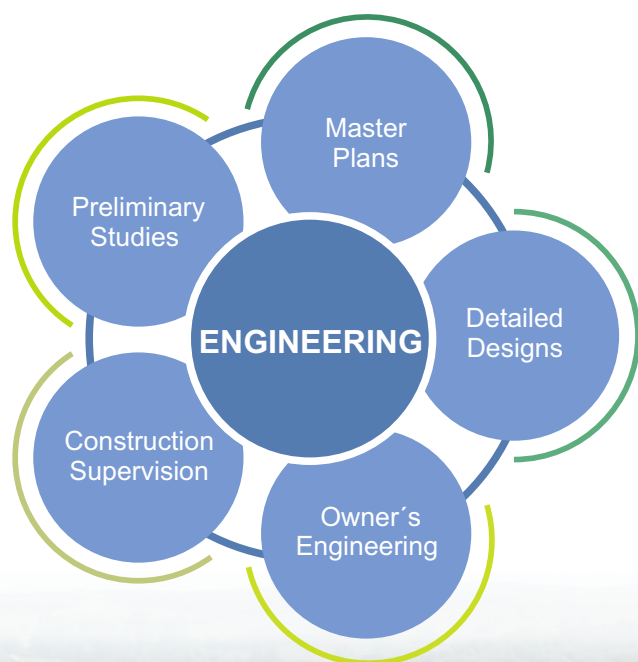

During its existence, the Group has participated - together with public or private developers – in the feasibility of multidimensional projects, some of them being structuring projects and with major impacts on the improvement of people's living conditions in the several countries where it has worked.

RURAL DEVELOPMENT

COBA has been providing rural engineering consultancy services since its founding in 1962. This results in a vast experience in the field of studies and designs of agricultural developments, acquired through the successful achievement of dozens of studies of this nature in several countries and regions around the globe.

Considering the growing volume of services in this area, technical teams were systematically increased in number and expertise, which, combined with a continuous renewal effort, led to the regular admission of young engineers of the specialty. This promoted the presence of a "school" within the company, able to create the best conditions for the continuous provision of services to its clients, with the highest quality levels.

INTERDISCIPLINARY STUDIES

In parallel, as a result of its integration in a firm of engineering consultants, all technicians involved in rural development studies enjoy the continuous collaboration of a large number of experts, particularly in hydraulics and water resources, environmental engineering, geology, geotechnics, electromechanics, structures, dams and roads. This interaction confers to their activity a highlighted efficiency in all studies of interdisciplinary nature.

As a result of the expansion of its activities, combined with its vast experience in the area, COBA is currently qualified to act in several domains of Rural Development, with capacity to carry out planning and management of water resources, soil studies, climate studies, livestock farming and forestry, regional planning, planning and development of agricultural production, precision farming, technical support to producers, business plans, technical, economic and financial risk analysis, design of hydraulic structures, rehabilitation and modernization of infrastructures, environmental studies, thematic mapping and surveying and geographic information systems.

INTERNATIONAL EXPERIENCE

The wide experience acquired in Southern Africa and in the Maghreb Region, South America and Europe enables COBA to cooperate with Public Authorities, Governmental Departments, International Organizations, Economic Groups or Private Entrepreneurs and perform, for this purpose, a full range of tasks that fall under the scope of technical consultancy services.
